THURSDAY EVENING, AUGUST 16.

A TROUBLED VISION.—A regiment quartered at a certain town in Scotland had among them an expert gymnast, who taught his brother soldiers how to walk across the barrack room on their hands. While engaged one evening the door opened, and the colonel, a strict disciplinarian, entered the room, looked attentively at the inverted company, shook his head gravely and departed without uttering a word. An order to be on parade next morning was the least punishment expected for this breach of discipline. Some days passed, however, and no notice being taken, it was thought an apology and explanation should be offered by the prime instigator of these unsoldierly movements. A reference being made to the memorable night, the colonel amazed the intended apologist by exclaiming, "Hush, sergeant! I would not have anybody know it for the world! The fact is, I had been dining out with an old brother officer who had served with me in India, and 'pon my life I had no idea the wine could have had such an effect upon me, but when I came to see if you were all right in your quarters I could have sworn that I saw you all upside down."
